Helke Kucke, 21 of Hamburg, came to Canada on a after she arrived she fell out of love with the man, she said.

She has already overstayed her visit by four days.

What Price for Power?

ahead immediately with its plan to make electrical power on the Peace River, but it does not say how, or at what price, or who is to buy power. It is for the Public Utilities Commission to ask all these and other questions, to insist on full and to protect the public interest from excessively high-cost

Earlier in the long power con-troversy, Mr. Mainwaring, president of the Wenner-Gren syndicate, said that it could not finance the devel-opment of the Peace if the Colum-bia scheme soon got under way, unless it was permitted to export electricity to the United States. Now, under the historic Canadian policy which forbids exports, the Peace is to be dammed without them, presuming, as Mr. Mainwaring says, his company can sell its stock to the public.

If so, it is difficult to understand where the combined electrical output of the two rivers can be sold in the visible future.

British Columbia's consumption is growing fast but not fast enough to absorb the power of both Peace and Columbia for a long time to come, according to the calculations of the Canadian Government. That is why it insisted that the Columbia scheme must be undertaken first, the Peace later on, when required. Yet apparently we are to have both projects at once, though the Canadian Government considers simultaneous development at this time taneous development at this time uneconomic and absurd.

Presumably the Peace promo-ters must have, or think they have, markets for their product. They say they are negotiating the sale of power to the B.C. Electric and the B.C. Power Commission.

Certainly they are entitled to seek any markets available but the people of British Columbia will expect the B.C. Electric and the Power Commission to refuse any uneconomic deal. Neither of these huge potential customers is entitled

THE WENNER-GREN SYNDI- to buy relatively expensive Peace power when much cheaper power can be obtained, a few years hence, from the Columbia.

The consuming public, and provincial industry, must not be sad-dled forever with unnecessarily high-cost power to suit the convenience and profits of the promoters, the B.C. Electric or Commission. On that point the public deserves some immediate assurance from Mr. Dal Grauer and Mr. Hugh Keenleyside.

It deserves some assurance from Mr. Bennett as well. He has quar-reled, in a repulsive display of bad manners, with the Canadian Government over the financial details of the Columbia scheme. He says his provincial Government will pay all the costs itself and cover them, of course, by revenues from the sale of power. There is really no finanof power. There is cial problem here.

But there is a major problem of ning. If the Columbia scheme timing. If the Columbia scheme were delayed by Mr. Bennett's quarrels, or for other reasons, if British Columbia faced a power famine a few years from now, then of course the Peace River promotion would be given the chance to grab the market.

This has always been the promoters' hope and expectation. They have made no secret of their belief that the Columbia scheme would be delayed indefinitely, that they alone could forestall a shortage by pro-viding relatively expensive power.

viding relatively expensive power.

Mr. Bennett says today that hothing will stand in the way of Columbia development, and we trust he will stand by that decision.

But having insisted from the beginning that the two schemes should be undertaken simultaneously, let him say how their joint output is to be sold, how the capital cost is to be sold, now the capital cost is to be financed; above all, how expensive Peace power can be paid for, except by the consumers. The long period of mystery, equivocation and contradiction has now passed. It is Mr. Bennett's duty to speak out in greater detail.

Head and Shoulders Above Them All

IN THE MIDST OF THE AL-In the MIDST of the Algerian crisis, hourly growing more confused and more violent, the true measure of the greatness of General Charles de Gaulle is again becoming evident. He stands above the storm, and above his countrymen, with a personal detachment and Olympian grandeur that is in itself a major factor in any hope of settlement.

Paradoxically, to the outside observer, it is the French inhabitants of Algeria who boo the president of France, and the Moslems—even those who shout "down with France"—who cheer de Gaulle.

President de Gaulle proposes a referendum for Algeria, whereby the people of that country. French

Only de Gaulle, of all the millions of persons involved, can find a solution, if indeed there is one, to this terrible problem. Only he, head and shoulders above the crowd, carries the prestige, the appeal and the unassailable integrity that may eventually reconcile, in part at least, the warring factions.

THE REQUEST BY THE WEST Indies government to Dr. Edith Ethel Lucas, director of the provincial high school correspondence branch, to organize a similar department in Jamaica, is an honest tribute to a Victoria educator who has done an excellent job in her specialty.

Longer Waits

From behind their carefully marshalled workmen, several French farm owners, faces contorted with anger, broke into the open and rushed towards the confused melee surrounding de Gaulle. With heart in mouth, one helplessly recalled the extremists' pamphlet of the day before, lauding "The example of Bonnier la Chappelle" the assassin of Admiral Darlan. But de Gaulle had accomplished his purpose. He turned again towards the Hotel de Ville, still walking slowly and calmly, but now surrounded by many, followers. Another Dominion Bureau of Statistics table illustrates quite dramatically how the period of unemployment for individuals is lengthening. For a man to be out of a job for one month is not a serious blow. But when he is out of work for longer periods, his entire life can be dislocated.

in October, 1959, 23,000 were classified as being out of work for from four to six months. In October of this year 53,000. In October, 1959, 87,000 had been out of work for from one to three months. In October this year the figure had jumped to 125,000.

The contraction of the manufacturing industries has been felt more in Ontario and B.C., where the largest percentage increases in unemployment occurred during the past 12 months.

This has resulted in a new phase in unemployment. The young, the uneducated and the unskilled were the first to go. Now the older, more experienced skilled worker is starting to lose his job.

During 1960, according to DBS "the increase in the number of unemployed aged 35 to 55 was larger, proportionally, than in other age groups."

Whereat the man fell back, comically abashed, as de Gaulle once more entered the Hotel de Ville. told, first of all, everything one needed to know about the venom of the opposition which de Gaulle must overcome in this unhappy Algeria.
One may be shocked by this opposition's open appeals to illegality. One may deplore its irrationality, its rejec-tion of all political realism. But one must sympathize, none the less, with these French men and women of Algeria who believe their whole deep rooted way of life is now at stake. De Gaulle's own sympathy is plain, in everything he does.

Great Gamble

What else, meanwhile, was told by those ten minutes in the square? Above all, I believe, they told why de Gaulle can hope to win his great gamble in Algeria, despite the heavy odds against him. Living through those ten minutes, nim. Living through those ten minutes, one felt at every instant, with Incom-parable intensity, the majestic power of de Gaulle's matchless courage combined with the special human grandeur that is his alone

That statement is not sentimental mush, either. What de Gaulle did at Ain Temouchent was a gesture, you may say, but it was a gesture with easily obrvable and far reaching practical ef-silence. In this breathless hush, the tail old man strode towards the people. Half blind without his glasses, he cannoned heavily into an intervening lamp post. But he gathered himself again and reached the crowd's fringes, where he began to shake hands with perfect unconcern. Two old bearded, Muslims bent low to kiss the proffered hand. The gesture told the opposition that this man would not be frightened or turned aside from his purpose. You could see it on their faces.

Perhaps more important still, this gesture spoke volumes to those who must work with de Gaulle to realize his great gamble. Around de Gaulle himself, a melee quickly formed, of chalk-faced security officers, and high officials who had hastened to follow their chief, and peo-ple in the crowd pressing forward to greet him.

must work with de Gaulle to realize linguage gramble.

That young colonel, with his sudden access of enthusiasm for a brave leader, surely had his own special significance, in this situation in which the French army is the finally controlling factor. And surely there was significance too, in the visible emotions of the men of tar higher rank, who first protested and then followed de Gaulle towards the crowd.

Among these principal human instru-ments of de Gaulle's policy, after all, there have been natural doubts about his gamble. Their increase of resolve, their strengthened confidence in de Gaulle's leadership, were all but visible and tangible.

One of them, the able and wise Min-ister for Algeria, Louis Joxe, put the point sharply and well when he re-marked: "Courage becomes easy when one is with de Gaulle."

Recently there has been much discussion on weapons of destruction and extermination, so a lecture on these subjects is very much in demand among thinking minds all over the world. In fact one of the most popular words everywhere in use is the word Peace. In this word all nations place their hopes for the future, and the will of the people cannot be ignored.

It is much to the credit of such men as Dr. Pauling that they realize the danger of nuclear power and plead for the banning of all atomic weapons and bombs. Peace and Columbia

The Times reports statements of Premier Bennett on Columbia develop-ment, and definite plans of Peace River

ment, and definite plans of Peace River
Power interests to go ahead.
Considering both, putting the Premier's exact words under the microscope in relation to the complete power drama, and his behavior last week, they assume disturbing significance.
Peace River hydro development was first broached in 1956. The same year the Frobisher interests carried out large scale surveys with a view to carry out scale surveys with a view to carry out a one billion dollar power industrial de-velopment in north central B.C. Within 12 months, the latter, with-out fanfare had abandoned its plans in entirety. Why? As responsible businessmen, they had sensed a change in the economic climate. The postwar boom was losing its momentum. The last four years has confirmed their judgment. The B.C. Government manifesting no similar intuition or restraint, is still absorbed in its own hallucinations about

"Golden 60's."

Analyzing statements thus far of politicians, principals, and experts with a Social Credit bias, the entire strategy is to encourage both Peace and Columbia developments for purposes of politi-cal prestige, with Peace development in the lead off role to avoid the possibility of its principals backing out, should the Columbia, (and its cheap power), get a head start.

Whether power from either will be needed when available is in the lap of chance and history. Before it is available, somebody will be paying interest on money spent before revenues accrue. Does Mr. Bennett think B.C. taxpayers want another $458 millions of "Contingent Liabilities," on their shoulders.

' Is Mr. Bennett dodging commitments to federal authorities to avoid federal interference or controls in a planned "power grid," to force B.C. consumers, industrial and domestic, to use 50 per cent of Peace power at a higher price, at a median with 50 per cent cheaper power from the Columbia? 'A MEMORABLE RECORD DUTY DONE

HMCS, by Lieut. Gib Milne. Toronto: Thomas Allen Limited. Pictures and text. 141 pages. $6.50. * * *

By Lt.-Cmdr. Stuart Keate, RCNVR (Ret.)

Generally speaking, information officers did not have too good a time of it with Canada's wartime navy. It's rather hard to press-agent a "Silent Service" doggedly determined to remain silent.

One haughty RCN type forever fixed their status in an extremely status-conscious world by greeting an information team with the words:

"Glad to have you chaps on board. You can consume all my bad gin."

Some of the Volunteer Reserve photographers, hastily recruited from newspapers and other unlikely places (and then told to get out of the road), found that senior officers' concepts of their duties were limited to:

(a) Taking pictures of their babies being baptized at the ship's bell; and

(b) Immortalizing on film the pay-bob who had just received his brass hat for facing the horrors of war at HMCS Naden and the Oak Bay Golf Club.

The more intrepid PROs (invariably nicknamed Flash" and "Scoop") quickly found a solution: go to sea. Because of their misty classification as "naval war correspondents," they found it easy to skip from ship to ship, without benefit of orders in triplicate. With Ottawa or Halifax 1,000 miles safely astern, they made astonishing forays, and were rarely heard from again. A pixieish naval character named Roy Kemp, for instance, was given up for dead until he was discovered in 1945, deep in western Europe, photographing chorines in the Wayne and Shuster show.

One of the best of naval war photographers was Lieut. Gib Milne, of Toronto, who breezed through the whole w as if it had been staged for his benefit. To his eraft he brought an artist's eye, considerable courage, and a knack for getting along with people.

With four of his wartime pals, Milne has produced in "HMCS" the book every Canadian navy man has been waiting for and, in so doing, has justified and honored the entire information service.

* * *

The four collaborators are Max Newton, one of Canada's top layout men and now production editor of Weekend magazine; Joseph Schull, the author and playwright; Scott Young, sports columnist of the Globe and Mail; and Frank Lowe, war correspondent and associate editor of Weekend.

Each of these, with the possible exception of Schull (who came from advertising), was a journalist in unlform. But no less than the career officers, they had a ove for the navy, and a feel for the sea, with all its broil and harassment, that is remarkably reflected in this

"One Photographer's Impressions" is the subtitle of the volume, but they cover almost every theatre of Canadian action at sea. Here are the unlovely corvettes,

Here, too, are the faces of the men and women who made the Canadian navy-Lieut. (now Commander) Maurice Chadwick of Victoria, his waxed mustachios curling fiercely; the Commando, calmly cleaning his nails with a wicked dagger; a handsome Wren with a Husky pup from Labrador snuggling into her parka. They are faces worth studying.

Milne's striking pictures are preceded by 30 pages of text (the work of Young, Schull and Lowe) in which some of the great battles of the RCN are recalled. Two pages are given over to the epic story of Convoy S C 42, in w the then-Lieutenant-Commander (now retired Rear-Admiral) James C. Hibbard of Victoria played a key role. This was the saga of September, 1941, which saw 66 merchant ships set out from their western ocean rendezvous, and 14 go down in successive nights of flame and fury.

In this same action Capt. J. D. Prentice, DSC, of Victoria, then in command of HMCS Chambly, put a boarding party onto a U-boat (already set for demoli tion) and brought back 38 Nazi prisoners.

There are also excellent pictures of Capt. (now Commodore Ret.) Val Godfrey of Victoria, leading his gallant old Prince Henry into the invasion of southern France.

Toronto transit commission chairman Clarence Downey said the Montreal locomotive works tender was the lowest of those of about a dozen firms that tendered, including some from Britain, Japan and the United States.

Cars for the city's first subway were manufactured in England, and caused some controversy because the award had not gone to a Canadian firm.

The new cars will be 74 feet long and will seat about 50 per cent more passengers than those in use on the present subway.

Oil Companies Urged to Use the coast refineries handle oil from the Peace River district. it was learned following the discussion.

A government spokes man said that the meeting with W. M. V. Ash of Shell Oil; W. O. Twaits, Imperial Oil; E. D. Loughney, British American Oil, and Ralph D. Baker, Standard Oil of B.C., was "very cordial" and covered the whole economies of the industry in

Main stumbling block to Mr. Bennett's proposal that B.C. Peace River oil should be used to some extent in coast refineries is that the cost, compared with cost of using Alberta oil, would be too great.

COST ARGUED

COST ARGUED

The oil companies argue that it would cost them at least 50 cents a barrel more for B.C. oil which is gathered in the Peace River by Trans-Prairie Pipelines Ltd., brought to rail-head at Taylor, near Fort St. John, and then shipped by tank car 600 miles on the Pacific Great Eastern Railway.

The problem of moving B.C. oil to market is complicated by political factors which dictate that an all-B.C. route must be used. Straight e conomics would indicate that the Trans-Prairie Pipelines gathering system — which ties in the Beatton River, Milligan Creek, Doig Creek and Boundary Lake oil fields to the railhead and refineries at Taylor and Dawson Creek — should be extended approximately 100 miles into Alberta to link up with the Peace River Pipelines Co. line at Sturgeon Lake near Grande Prairie.

The B.C. oil could then be carried by Peace River Pipelines to the Trans Mountain line which starts at Edson, Alberta, and from there to the Vancouver and U.S. northwest refinery areas.

TWO FAMILIAR .

TWO FAMILIAR

The B.C. government, however, has made it clear that only an "all-B.C." route will be considered for moving B.C. oil, which leaves only the costly PGE rail shipments or a new $150,000,000 line from the strength of the shipment of the shipme Trans Prairie line to connect with Trans-Mountain in B.C. mewhere near Kamloops.

At least two of the oil executives who conferred with Mr. Bennett Tuesday, Mr. Ash of Shell and Mr. Loughney of B-A. are thoroughly familiar with the economics of the situation since their firms, along with Texaco, Pan-American Patrolina and several can. year to build the 100-mile extension into Alberta.

The oil industry does not feel that Peace River oil reserves at the present time are sufficient to justify the building of the $150,000,000 all B.C. pipeline link and insists that until sufficient reserves are proved up the shortest possible link with Trans-Mountain—link Alberta—is the only fees.

FIVE POLITICAL RULES OF WAR

How to win an election with the five of war" of politics was explained. Wednesday night by a CCFer who has won three of them.

Erhart Regier, national organizer for the CCF and MP for Burnaby Coquitlam, was speaking to the New Party nominating convention here for Esquimalt-Saanich. He won elections in 1953, 57 and 58.

The five rules: Seize the initiative. "You should have been the first party to nominate," said Mr. Regier. You attack; you never defend."

3. Never underestimate a woman. They are worth a dozen men" in a political campaign.
4. Call on every home five times. First to check if they're on the voter's list second to hand out literature; third to get a donation; fourth, another call with literature and a little talk; fifth on election day to get the vote out. 5. Raise $4,000. That's a minimum. Some should come from unions, some from other parts of Canada ("This is a national campaign") and the rest from 2,000 homes in the riding. A good point to remember, said organizer Regier: "There are almost always more people who don't vote than votes for the winning candidate."

Scared Young Girl Outstared Armed Bandit

Heroine of Wednesday night's attempted holdup of city grocery store was Joan Midlane, 1621 Jubilee, a 16-year-old friendly, unassuming Grade 11 student at Victoria High School.

She scared off the unwelcome, gun-toting customer hy staring him straight in the eye and leaning on a buzzer nmon help from the owner in the rear residence.

Joan was looking after the Palm Grocery Store at Bay and Blanshard for proprietress Mrs. E. L. Askew at about 5.30 p.m. when the would-be bandit walked in pointed a gun at her stomach and demanded money. "Frankly, I was scared of the man," she admitted

"He came in with his collar turned up and his hat pulled down at the front and held the gun pointing slightly downwards towards me. I couldn't tell if it was a real gun or just a toy," she said.

"He was very quiet," she recalled. "Apart from de-manding the money he didn't say a word. There were three little boys in the store at the time and they didn't notice a thing. They asked me later if the man had been a real burglar."

The man confronted her when she turned around from filling a bag of onions. In his hands was a gun and one store's own paper bags.

Joan, who is busy right now with school exams, acted When he pointed the gun at me, the only thing I could think of was to press the buzzer," she said.

The buzzer is normally used to summon Mrs. Askew from her house at the rear of the store but this time was

Kings, Queens and Princesses Attend Belgian Royal Wedding

Dressed in formal clothes, Princess Margaret's commoner husband searched up and down long rows of chairs in the throne room of Brussels Palace, where the civil ceremony was held.

He looked at the name cards, but couldn't find his.

Finally he walked away and stood with hands clasped behind him looking like the most lonesome man in the Belgian capital.

Eventually, a red-coated flunkey sighted him, hurried to his side and led him to his fourth-row chair between Princess Elizabeth of Hesse and the mother of Princess Fabiola.

Princess Margaret had no trouble finding her chair.

Inside the Church of Saints Michel and Gudule, Fabiola's nerves gave way again and a sprig of flowers slipped from the bouquet in her trembling

VETERINARIAN!

WELL, YOU CERTAINLY

MADE A MONKEY OUT OF YOURSELF AT THE PARTY LAST NIGHT!

Propellers Amidships New Idea

conventional place has been at the stern of the vessel. And in this position they have been so fitted to exert a "pushing" effect to drive the boat ahead.

Now comes along an Ohio in-ventor, Paul R. Baldwin by name, who is telling boat manufacturers that for years they have had the propellers facing the wrong way and that they should turn them around. And he just doesn't mean that the propellers should be fitted so as to exert a "pulling" force which has been done in the past of a few special racing craft and more recently in outboard-inboard units but also that the propellers should not be at the rear of the craft but some place up closer to

Such a revolutionary innovation in the propeller drive of power boats would not gain much aftention from marine engineers and naval architects unless proven by practical tests, and of this Mr. was fully aware. So he tested his new idea of propulsion in a 27-foot cruiser that had been driven in the conventional manner, and compared results.

Angle Eliminated

The two 100 hp engines in the uiser were left in their installed position. But the drive shafts were brought back to a V-drive type gear box and from them the shaft went through the hull and forward towards amidships to about one third the length of the boat, there eliminating the drive shaft

Reversing the propellers placed them shead of their supporting struts so that the propeller blades got a full power bite on each revo-lution, regardless of speed. While recommended located near the centre line of the boat would have reduced drag, the usual twin rudders were left in their original stern position.

By rotating the By rotating the propellers to-wards the centre of the keel—the opposite from the conventional, Baldwin anticipated that the wake would force the boat upward and this, in turn, would provide level riding and more stability. And that's what he got, it is reported. The installation reduced the hull angle at cruising speed from 12 to six degrees with a corresponding increase in forward vision, and cut minimum planing speed from 2,300 rpm to 2,000 rpm. Some experts feel it will make possible the marine architect's long-wished-for dream—a level riding boat.

The tests also proved that the boat could pivot on its axis without Arthur R. Wycoff, a naval architect, in commenting on the drive stated, "Your tractor drive offers a potentially prominent advantage of operating in water, free of turbulence induced by shaft and strut. The thrust of a conventional drive is not all translated into forward motion because part of it is dissipated in the futile effort to lift the boat out of the water.

"Propellers would not be kicked out of the water in violent pitching action. Holding a boat on course or docking it in a strong wind, with conventional drive, is somewhat like trying to lift a heavy bench by a leg singlehanded. A midship drive would keep the vessel's bow from swinging off, and assure the application of maximum power in the desired direction. That alone is a joy to contemplate."

Shaft angle of this tractor drive can be controlled from bridge. View is toward bow.

Meadow Use Fight Looms In Burnside

Battle over proposed devel-opment of a 22 acre meadow is shaping up between indus-trial developers and nearby Saanich residents.

Some 120 petitioners opposing rezoning of the property, at Burnside and Trans-Canada Highway, and Dominion Con-struction Ltd. of Vancouver will have a chance to present both sides of the argument at a council public hearing, Reeve George Chatterton said Wednesday

The company seeks rezoning of the land, now reserved for motel- and auto court use, to permit establishment of a light industrial estate.

The petitioners, owning surrounding property, have objected that industry would reduce the value of their property; spoil the yiew; create noise and other nuisances; and possibly result in adjacent railway trackage being developed into a loading zone

The petition, circulated by C. A. Mancor, 629 Sedger, and R. B. Parlby of 621 Sedger. also contends that there is ample room in a depressed area of Douglas Street for establishment of a light industrial zone.

Scared Young Girl Outstared Armed Bandit

Heroine of Wednesday, night statempted holdup of a city grocery store was Joan Midlane, 1621 Jubilee, a 16-year-old friendly, unassuming Grade 11 student at Victoria

She scared off the unwelcome, gun-toting customer by staring him straight in the eye and leaning on a buzzer-to summon help from the owner in the rear residence.

Joan was looking after the Palm Grocery Store at Bay and Blanshard for proprietress Mrs. E. L. Askew at about 5.30 p.m. when the would-be bandit walked in, pointed a gun at her stomach and demanded money "Frankly, I was scared of the man," she admitted

"He came in with his collar turned up and his hat pulled down at the front and held the gun pointing slightly downwards towards me. I couldn't tell if it was a real gun or just a toy," she said:

"He was very quiet," she recalled. "Apart from de manding the money he didn't say a word. There were three little boys in the store at the time and they didn't notice a thing. They asked me later if the man had been a real burglar."

The man confroned her when she turned around from filling a bag of onions. In his hands was a gun and one of the store's own paper bags.

Joan, who is busy right now with school exams, acted "When he pointed the gun at me, the only thing I could think of was to press the buzzer," she said.

The buzzer is normally used to summon Mrs. Askew from her house at the rear of the store but this time was
